

Observations on a libel Called the No Protestant- plot & London. 1682.

LIBUSC 4/3 Not L 65 450

A J.KENDALI

LETTER

To A

FRIEND,

Containing certain

OBSERVATIONS

Upon some Passages, which have been Published

In a Late

LIBELL

Intituled, the Third Part of

NO

PROTEST ANT-PLOT;

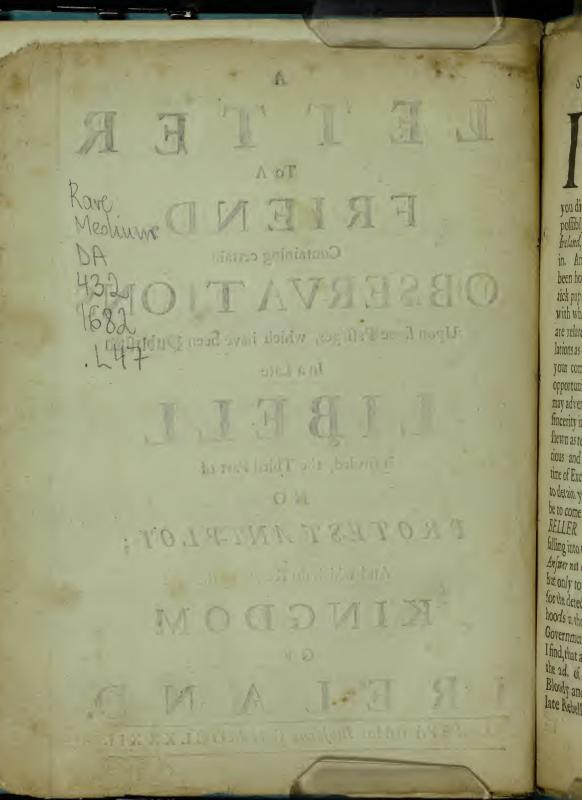

And which do Relate to the

KINGDOM

O F

IRELAND.

London Printed for Benjamin Tooke MDCLXXXII.

Ireland.

in. An been ho

tick pap with wh

are relati lations as your con opportun may adve fincerity i hewn aste cious and

Have received the third part of No Protestant Plot which you were pleased to send me out of England: And I cou'd have wished the two preceding parts had accompanied it, which I don't find are to be met with in this Kingdom; But I am apt to believe you did forbear the fending of them, because they might not possibly contain such things as the other does in Relation to Ireland, and concerning which you only defire to be satisfied And therefore I am as heartily thankful for this, as I have been honeftly careful to inform my felf by the most Authentick papers and the most knowing persons in Affairs here, with what truth the Particulars of it touching this Kingdom are related in it; For I will not pretend to meddle with its relations as to other places, both because they are no part of your commands to me, and in regard I have not the same opportunities of coming to the knowledg of them: But this I may adventure to fay, that if the Author did use no greater fincerity in his delivery of passages as to the one, than he has shewn as to the other, he is absolutely one of the most Malicious and Barefaced LIBELLERS that (even in this time of Excess of such Creatures) has been produced: For not to detain you too long with Prefacing, but as briefly as may be to come to the matter, neither therein to follow this LI-BELLER with a direct or formal Answer, for fear of falling into the Error against which Solomon thus Cautions, Answer not a fool in his own kind lest thou also be like unto him. But only to make some few Animadversions upon his LIBEL, for the detection of his Malice, and the conviction of his Falfhoods in those parts of it which touch this Kingdom and the Government of it, according as you expect, and I have premised; I find, that althô at his first entrance upon Irish Affairs in page the 2d. of his LIBEL, he appears as an Abborrer of the Bloody and Cruel Massacres committed by the Papists in the late Rebellion of Ireland, yet he onely assumes that shape in this this Conjuncture of Time, the better to Infinuate himself with, and the more plausibly to Convey unto the too Credulous Populace, his designed Calumnies upon persons Concerned in the present Government of this Kingdom; who are all firm Protestants, and most of whom by their Zealous oppositions of the Popish Party during the time of that Rebellion, as every of them by their steady Administrations since, have manifested the greatest Abhorrency in the World of those Cruelties; Although they are opposite to the present FACTIOUS and Presented Protestant Party; Which therefore thus hires and employs base and Mercenary sellows to invent and publish scandals of them.

And notwithstanding he wou'd in page the 16. where he makes his next step as to Ireland, seem only to inveigh against the Ingratitude of the PAPISTS for the lenities they might have received, yet in his handling thereof, he scatters malicious invectives against the Ministers here, and unjustly glances upon them, by making instances of lenity to have been extended to the PAPISTS, and of severity to have been measured to the DISSENTERS since the Kings restauration, most whereof are persectly invented, and not any of them can this Government reasonably be charged with. Of the former fort are these his following allegations muster'd up in page the 17th. viz.

redt

outw

havin

thing

any of

fore th

which

dure,

this Ob

Warran

Wasa (

bellions

Cometin

lented t

other R

highest e

allarance

been ter

the UG

First, that PRIESTS and FRIERS are tolerated to swarm and openly to Celebrate Mass in Ireland. The contrary whereof is universally known in the Kingdom, Repeated Proclamations having been Issued from the Lord Lieutenant and Council for the Banishing of FRIERS, and all others of the Popish Regular and Titular Clergy out of this Dominion, and promising Rewards which have been punctually performed to such as shou'd find and seize them, which for a great while has render'd that sort of People not to be visible in these parts, and for the PRIESTS (who were permitted to stay in all times, insomuch, that not any of the ORDERS which came out of England, nor even an ADDRESS which was lately made by the House of Commons there to the King, and by his Majesty sent hither for banishing the rest of the Popish Clergy, did mention them) Altho they are suffer'd to remain, yet are they so strictly inhibited by Proclamations, and those of them caught Offending so severely punished, that for a Considerable time here has not been any such open Celebration of the MASS heard of amongst us, as the LIBELLER hath falsly suggested.

(3)

rote-

e Po.

them great-

h ther

Prote-

ase and

here he

against

y might

nalicious

glances

en exten-

measured

of where.

is Govern.

are thefe

d to swift

ary where-

roclamati-

and Coun.

the Popila

nd promi-

to fuch as

is render'd

nd for the

nsomych,

land, not

le of Com-

r banishing

, VIZ.

l

Secondly, that the Introduction of the whole Popish Hierarchy into this Kingdom was Connived at, and a publick Assembly of the PAPAL Clergy allowed by a Commission of the Duke of ORMONDE to be keld and to sit in 1666. The scandalous untruth of both which, do's upon inquiry appear very evidently, for as to that pretended Commission for Assembling of the Papal Clergy, which I begin with, because from what I shall fay by way of answer to it, will naturally flow a confutation of that feigned connivance of the Popish Hierarchy: it is to be observed that as my Lord Duke of Ormonde, whose word will surely outweigh that of the LIBELLERS, do's utterly deny his ever having granted a Commission of that kind, so is there no such thing to be found, nor the least footstep of it to be met within any of the Offices, through which all Commissions must pass before they can be of any vertue, and where they are Recorded for every one to have recourse unto; Besides, the Ground upon which it is manifest the LIBELLER wou'd raise this stru-Eture, and the sourse from whence it is plain he wou'd derive this Objection, when explained, and confidered, cannot bear or Warrant any such thing, for they stand thus, Peter Walsh (who was a stiff opposer both of the Popes Nuntio, and of the whole Rebellious party in Ireland during all the time of the Irish Rebellion) sometime after the Kings Restauration having projected and Presented to his Majesty, a Remonstrance signed by him and divers other Roman Catholicks of this Kingdom, and containing the highest expressions of Loyalty to his Majesty, and the largest assurances of Fidelity to the Crown, that had ever before been tender'd by Papists, and which proved so derogatory to the Usurpations of the Pope, that it was discountenanced and Cen-A 2

Censur'd at Rome, Lovain, and other Popish Universities, and oppos'd by the Popes Internuncio then residing at Bruxels, who did all that in him lay to dehort PAPISTS against it, and upon the account of all which, the subscribers and adherers to it have not dar'd unto this day to adventure their persons into any forreign parts where the Pope bears sway. His Majesty was very well satisfied with it, and upon Walsh's repairing into this Kingdom about the year 1666. for propagating such the Doctrine of it (which no Loyal Protestant cou'd be against) was pleased to send his instructions to my Lord Duke of Ormande His then Lord Lieutenant, for his suffering of Peter Walsh to meet with some Titular Bishops, at that time here, to perswade them by his Arguments, and to gain others of the Papists by their Examples, to subscribe unto that Remonstrance: which meeting His Grace accordingly Permitted, but onely, and fo strictly to that end proposed, as He was both vigilant in seeing that those Bishops did not make use of it to any other purpose and careful in providing that they shou'd not take up too much time, even in the doing of that business, and therefore very early perceiving that they cou'd not come to fuch an Agreement as might produce the effects which were expected, He Ordered them not only to disperse, but to quit the Kingdom, insomuch that afterwards when His Grace was call'd from the Government, there were not above three Popish Bi-Shops remaining, two whereof were Bedrid and the third absconded; altho when His Grace returned again to the Government (in immediate Succession to my Lord of Essex) he found no less then thirteen of them to be here, and them he has caused to be driven out also, and this sufficiently confutes the LIBEL-LERS allegation of His Grace conniving at the Popish Hierarchy being introduced, which in English is Governance, since He did thus expel the Governors in whom it resided.

pla

Gra

tream

sucus

fant

Tal pl

It can

fince]

Were

ders in

the E

trient

10 be

Thirdly, That when the PLOT was to have been executed in ENGLAND anno 1678: there were no fewer than fifteen Sheriffs in IRELAND, who were either professed and avowed PA-

PAPISTS, or such as bred and educated their Children in that Religion; The notorious untruth whereof appears by the Original Roll of the SHERIFFS of that Year (whose Names are placed in the * Margin to abide all scrutiny if there shou'd be Occasion) not one of them there mentioned being so principl'd, or suspected to be so qualified, especially by my Lord Lieutenant, who cannot be supposed, to know every Mans person, much less to look into his heart who happens to be placed in that Office, and therefore if one or two differently qualified should chance to have escaped Him through want of knowledge of Information, and throughout a whole Kingdom, His Grace might very well be excused in fuch a Case, as it falling out that there was not one in this, He is to be extreamly Justified. And whereas he affirms, That the Papists have promiscuously before with His Majesties Protestant Subjects been advanced to several places of power and trust, If he means publick places of power and trust, as he must if he means any thing he says, upon a strict inquiry made it cannot be found that any PAPISTS Morifon and char. Newtowne. have had advancements of that kind

* Co. Dub. Ja. Springham Esq; Co. Lowth Ja. Smallwood Efg; Kings Co. John Levester Esq; Co. wexford John Tench: Senior Co. Kilkenny John Kealy Esq; dying within the time, Hen. Webb was made Sheriff the 23d of April 1678.

Co. Meath. Nath. Poole Efq; Queens Co: William Gilbert Kiq; Co. wicklow Christopher usher Esq;

Co. Kildare Edward Bagget Esq; Co: westmeath Edward Terrill Esq; Co. Catherlagh George Beech Efq, Co. Longford Geo. Conyngham Esq; Co. Cork Richard Hull Esq; Co. Limerick John Oddell, Esq;

Co. Kerry william Ryves Esq: Co. Waterford Tho. Christmas Esqe

Co. Clare Tho Hickman Esq: Co. Tipper ary Tho. Osborne Esq. -

Co. Gallaway Char. Holcroft Efq: Co. Leytrim Henry Crofton Efq: Co. Sliga Roger Smith Efq:

Co. Mayo Sr. George Bingham Ear. Co. Rofcommon Ed. Gardiner Efq:

Co. Donegall Geo. Vaughan Eiq: Co. Tyrone John Moderale Esq:

Co. Firmanagh Ferdinando Davi. Co. Antrin Edw. Harrison Esq:

Co. Armagh Godfry Walker Esq: Co. Monaghan Rich. Johnson Esq: -

Co. Down Hugh Eccles Esq: Co. Cavan John Coyn Esq:

Co. & City of Londonderry James fince His Majesties Restauration, save only such of them as were made Justices of the Peace by the Lord BERKLEY's Orders in the time of his Government, and Colonel Richard Talbott made Captain of a Troop of Horse by Commission from the Earl of ESSEX when He was Chief Governour, so as the present Government which this reflection most Darts at appears to be the least intitled to it. Fourth-

Hierarch executed iteen Shil avoned PAnogu it have

,who

o any

as ve-

to this

ne Do-

esw (f.

rmonde

Valle to

erswade

epifts by

which

and fo

n feeing

purpole

herefore

fuch an

expected,

he King.

vas call'd

Popish Bi-

third ab.

Govern.

las caules

LIBEL

up too +

Fourthly, That though a Proclamation was published in Ireland, for searching the houses of all Roman Catholiques for Arms, yet when the SHERIFF of the County of GALWAY ment in pursuance thereof to search the Earl of CLANRICKARDS house, where as he was informed all the Papists in that County had lodged their Arms, the said Earl produced a Warrant from my Lord LIEUTENANT the Duke of ORMONDEthat his house should not be searched. Which Article altho it be placed in page the 27th of the LIBELL yet for order sake is ranked and taken notice of here with the others of page the 17th in the Libell, because it is of the same nature, and of the like truth with them: For my Lord Duke of ORMONDE was so far from granting a Warrant to that Earl to hinder his house from being searched for Arms, that He never so much as gave him a Licence to keep any, but contrarywise where the Earl of ESSEX in his Government had given the said Earl his Licence to keep a quantity of Arms, they were fince by my Lord Duke of ORMOND'S Orders taken from him, and delivered into the publick stores.

Lastly, he alleadges, That yet while all this forbearance and tenderness have been expressed to the PAPISTS, the DISSENTERS have fallen under the misfortune of having an express Law made against them, and divers of them have been prosecuted to Fine and Imprisonment upon it. Wherein the LIBELLER shews his Ignorance as well as his Malice, for although the Statute of 2d. Eliz. for the Uniformity of Common-Prayer in this Kingdom (Which is without doubt against the PAPISTS, and who are frequently profecuted upon it) should by construction be extended unto the DISSENTERS. (as I never heard it to be so Adjudged in the Case of any of them, so far are They from having been Prosecuted notwithstanding their openly numerous and frequent Meetings) yet was there never any Particular express Law made against Them either before, or as the LIBELLER wou'd have it believed, since the KINGS Restauration, And as that too

mo-

do

Kin

Iho

fona

hall

like

gains

made

face of

upon.

fore h

fome .

receiv

a Par

NAN

PEAT

of for

there

33 COT

Point

migh

being

of 0

edia

gain

moderate Act of 2d. Elizab. be all that is in Force against the PAPISTS or that can be supposed to be against the DIS-SENTERS, so it is to be wished that for the quiet of the Kingdom, more and severer Laws were made against both. And this brings me to the latter part of my Affertion, that as most of the LIBELLERS instances of the Lenity shewn the PAPISTS and of the severity extended to the DISSENTERS in this Kingdom, fince the KINGS restauration are invented, which I hope I have fully proved to you, so that none of them can be reafonably charged upon the present Government, which I think, I shall be able very easily and briefly to shew you. For all the LI-BELLER observes with semblance of truth, and which looks like an Objection in that point as to this GOVERNMENT against which he levels it, is, that there hath not any Laws been made against the PAPISIS in Ireland since the Kings return. save one against their living in Wall'd Towns.

and i the truth

lo fat

from him a arl of

acence

Duke I into

earance

S, the

ing an

ve been

ein the

for al-

f Com-

againtt

TERS,

Case of

rolanted

setings)

have it

hat too

But if the method of enacting Laws in Ireland be thought upon, how that by Poynings Act the Chief Governour cannot call a Parliament, for the making of Laws in that Kingdom, before he prays the King and Councils leave for it, and transmits some Bills for their Approbation to be passed in it, and untill he receives those Bills back again with Licence for the calling of a Parliament, and if it be Consider'd that my LORD LIEUTE-NANT the Duke of ORMOND fince his being here, hath RE-PEATEDLY prayed such Licence, and Transmitted Bills, whereof some were as effectual against the PAPISTS (although there were none among them against other DISSENTERS) as cou'd be devised, and that he and the Kingdom were difarpointed therein, by the oppositions of some Persons who are mightily extoll'd by the LIBELIJER, that objection of there being no more Laws against the PAPISTS cannot in the least affect this Government, especially in the person of the Duke of ORMOND, neither can his Grace be thought to be concerned in the letter of suspension of, or dispensation with the Law against PAPISTS living in wall'd Towns, which the LIBELLER

men-

mentions; that being procured and executed when the Lord BERKLY was Governour, no more than he is to be responsible if the Orders for the taking off that suspension which the LIBELLER passes over with silence, and which were grounded upon the Address of the House of Commons in England, were not as effectually, as they shou'd be put in execution here, they happening to come Over hither in the time of the Earl of Essex's Government.

of

And

recei

who

havi

whic

ther

in th

reflec

gistra

figned

that h

the fo

allow 1

on of accusa

ther co

the II

in thi

gettin

to the

RATI

at LO

With r

ed RI

on his

can

After the LIBELLER has thus, as in a false Artificial Glass, which is able to make the best faces look deformed, misrepresented our GOVERNOUR and others co-operating with him for the KINGS service in the Government, and as he fancies has by his traducements of them rendred the worst of things, which he the worst of Men can feign to be believed concerning them: he proceeds to page the 40th, and from having before endeavoured to asperse them as if they shou'd by his sittitious indulgences to the PAPISTS incourage them in the old POPISH PLOT; He there advances and in effect charges them with being ABETTORS with them in the new fangled PROTESTANT PLOT; But the persons he names for support of this Charge are some of them, so ridiculously Idle, and others of them so notoriously wicked, and the instances he brings for proof of it, are all of them so manifestly false, that if the LIBELLER were not possest with a singular spirit of folly as well as of lying, he wou'd never have mention'd them, for as to SMITH who I find to be the first of the persons named, he is such an abject wretch, and so great a malefactor, and even in the Goal, where he has most deservedly layn for a great while, and still lies, do's daily appear so vicious a thing, that he had been only fit for the Laws to take notice of, were it not for the nature of the Information he gave in, which Authority wou'd not pass over without examining, for be it known unto the LIBELLER and to all such whose turn he wou'd serve, and under whose pay he writes, that those in GOVERNMENT here, are as apprehensive of Dangers as they bro

the

nded

enot

they of

tificial,

g With

l as he

orst of

d con-

naving

s ficti-

the old

charges

w fang-

for lup-

le, and

nces he lse, that

firit of

d them,

persons

alefactor,

layn for

a thing

of, were

n, which for be it

ole turn

those in

as they

can

can be; Though not as inventive of them as they, for this only reason, are, because not in GOVERNMENT there; Therefore of the great sholes of Informations brought in here, since the first discovery of the Plot, and which tended to the proof of it. not one was ever rejected, altho coming from the vilest of Men. And therefore when that of SMITH against the Priest St. LAWRANCE proffer'd it self at DUBLIN; it was immediately received and solemnly proceeded upon, the Lord PRIMATE who was then the first of the Council on the place, by the Lord LIEUTENANTS happening at that time to be in the Country. having conven'd such COUNCELLORS as were in the Town, and with them having given all necessary Orders in that affair, which produced the immediate apprehension of St. Lawrence, together with the seisure of his papers, and the Commitment of his Person, and SMITH had all the Encouragement fit to be given him in this his Discovery, insomuch that if any persons, were found, reflecting upon his Evidence, they were reprimanded by the Magistracy for it, But this did not answer his end, in what he defigned and expected by making such discovery, being no less than that he shou'd forwith be permitted to go out of prison upon the foot of it, Which there was no reason in the earth yet to allow him, until he had to satisfaction either proved his accusation of St. LAWRANCE upon his Tryal, or disproved others accusations of himself, and for which he was imprison'd, upon his own Tryal; And therefore, he did betake himself unto another course, and to walk in the steps of some of his predecessors the IRISH evidences, who obtained their releasments out of prison in this Kingdom where they found they were too much known, by getting themselves to be sent for as Witnesses into ENGLAND where they were too little known; For which purpose, according to the Mode of the times we are fallen into, he Prepares a NA-RATIVE with a letter to inclose it in, unto a BUSIE Person at LONDON in such matters, and by the assistance of, together with recomendatory letters from a half witted fellow and wretched RIMER of this Town; gets them transmitted to him, who upon his receiving of them, and according to his accustomed manner of Y472-

on

bin

prea

wit

and

in t

the(

beca

a blu

ces V

obse

expre

lo as have you a

Th

LET,

what r

of the

March

he wor

may b

in thos

the []]

good (1

make !

but as i

the tell

sing of

of LOR

running headlong without weighing matters, or if he chance to do it, making the scales to light on that side which contains least truth, and is likeliest to make the greatest stir, conducts them with all speed and busse to WHITEHAL, and in hopes of having this fresh INFORMER or rather new Engine sent for over to work with, lodges them with Mr. Secretary 7ENKINS for the Information of the KING and COUNCIL, having most dutifully and mannerly taken especial care before to Print and publish them for the Amusement of the world, but His MATESIY and the Lords knowing this Conductor and his drift, too well, and experiencing such kind of Artifices as this Informer used, too much, wou'd not be so passed upon by them, and yet at the same time were pleased so far to take notice of those Papers, as to send them over hither with Orders to proceed upon them according to Law here, where the matter of them were properly Cognizable, and where preparations were made for St. Lawrence his being strictly prosecuted upon them, The KINGS Counsel having by order and with great circumspection formed a firm Indictment for misdemeanor (which was all that in their Opinions the matter could bear) to be preferred against him. and the Judges having carefully provided that no PAPIST nor any suspected to be POPISHLY affected shou'd pass upon the Tryal of him, which came on the last Michaelmas Term in the Kings Bench, Where a Jury all confisting of the strictest Protestants and ablest Citizens of the City of Dublin did appear where SMITH had the greatest liberty and latitude afforded to him, and which he made use of in the proffering and management of his evidence, that any Court did ever give or Witness take, and where St. LAWRENCE (whose person I know not, and whose profession I abominate, and therefore, you may be fure I speak impartially what was observed universally) had nothing beyond meer fustice extended to him, and as a part thereof was that of Allowance of Counsel to plead for him, (which the LIBELLER with more Malice than Law makes his Observation upon) to be reckon'd, since he standing indicted for misdemeanor only, no Judicature cou'd have refufed

ce to

s leaft

them

f hav.

over

VS for

ost du-

int and

FEST

rell, and

sed, too

t at the

apers, as

on them

proper-

St. Lan.

KINGS

ormed a

in their

inst him, PIST nor

ipon the n in the

Hest Pro-

appear, afforded

manage

Witness

now not,

may be

ally bao

as a part for him

w mako

Standing

ave refu sed it to him Justly, so as all things seemed to concur, if not to have been calculated for St. LAWRENCES Condemnation, except SMITH himself, who by variety of villanies proved upon him in other Cases, which he cou'd not deny, and by many and palpable incoherences and contradictions that fell from · him in this Case, which were not to be reconcil'd, did wholly prevent it, for they were the reasons that particularly swared with the Jury to acquit St. LAWRENCE by their verdicts, and generally made all others who heard them, to do the like in their Judgments, and these were the motives, which made the Gentlemen of the long Robe (as they have declared) to forbear, because they were ashamed to appear on the behalf of such a blur'd and stellionated Creature, and none of those wild instances which the LIBELLER invents and mentions only to debase them, and to restect upon Authority, and which it is to be observed he at once insimuates to be believed by others, and yet expresly says, he will not so much as conjecture them himself: so as he needed not in the Conclusion of this his fable of SMITH, have any more told us that he was no diviner, than I need tell you after all this that he is an idle Dreamer.

The next man our LIBELLER produces is 7 AMES MOR-LEY, whom he Stiles Captain MORLEY, though I know not for what reason, unless it be because of his appearing at the head of the band of IRISH WITNESSES, which fometime fince Marched to LONDON, and of his drawing them up with what he would have them swear unto for him, but however true he may be in giving of that Title to him, I am sure he is most false in those things he relates of and possibly from him, and because the LIBELLER will not be long before he makes my words good (though neither I nor all the World will ever be able to make his so) he no sooner mentions the name of MORLEY, but as if it were a spell to raise a lye with, he falls plum into the telling of one concerning him, by introducing and expresfing of him to have appeared and Sworn before the Committee of LORDS and COMMONS in England, two Consults which the Pa-

for

an

the

N.C

gail

BO

WOI

doa

Who

do n

his 1

magi

lity

ring

redly

lice

fible them

Were

guels

Papists had in Ireland in reference to the extirpating the Protestant Religion in that Kingdom, whereas it appears by MORLEY'S Examination taken either before a Committee of the LORDS, or of the COMMONS, or both, that he did not swear to those Consults, but only to a hearsay touching them; which ke said he had from HUBBERT TIRRELL and Henry o Neal, who it is to be observed, were two Beggars, and such miscreants that an honest and a discerning PROTESTANT who knew them as well as MORLEY did, wou'd hardly have adventur'd torepeat any thing after them, much less to conduct what they shou'd say, unto publick assemblies, and in prejudice of any who was a PROTESTANT also, especially Considering that as it is well known MORLEY had such experience of their villanies, as before that time, he did reject their proferr'd Oaths to him in some Trial which he had in this Kingdom, however afterwards he became so reconcil'd to them, as in the last PARLIAMENT at Westminster to make use of their names for injuriously accusing of Sir 70HN DAVIS, a person who with all his Relations, have ever been eminent professors of the PROTESTANT Religion, and for that reason known to be obnoxious to the POPISH Party, and it is besides to be remarked that Tirrell has lately and solemnly disavowed his ever having known of any such Consults, and declared that what he had informed concerning them was a meer fiction, which as TYRRELL alledges MORLEY prompted and bired him to make, and to get others to swear unto for carrying on some designs of his own, and what is yet more remarkable ô NEAL (who has lately hang'd for a Robbery in this KINGDOM) did just before he was thrown off the Ladder, Confess himself to be perjured, both in what he deliver'd as to those CONSULTS, and in what he had sworn against Sir JOHN DAVIS, and that he was by MORLEYS desire led into the latter perjury, which Confession coming from one in the instant he was going to the dead, must be convincing with all but such who will not be perswaded the one rose from the dead; After the LIBELLER has thus begun and dispach'd this by of the

vhich Neal,

reants

them

l tore

no was

1s Well

nies, as

bim in

rwards

s Rela-

STANT

to the

t Tirrell

n of any

concer-

alledges

get others

rn, and

as lately

pefore he

perjused,

, andin

and mat

וליוויין זי

it k was all but he dead;

disparad

this untruth of MORLEY, who has no reason to con him thanks for it, fince it has provoked and produced the representation of these truths concerning him, he growes upon his own hands, and to shew his proficiency in the lying-trade, he proceeds to the delivery of a groffer falcity, in afferting, that fix or feven witnesses have been procured to depose in this Kingdom, that MORLEY was suborned by the Earls of ESSEX and SHAFTS-BURY, and by Sir ROBERT CLAYTON, to swear treason against the Duke of ORMONDE the Lord CHANCELLOR BOYLE and Sir JOHN DAVIS, whereas upon fearch in the Offices where things of that nature (if any had been,) wou'd be lodg'd, and upon inquiry from the Officers who cou'd not but know of them if they were there, it cannot be found that ever any one such deposition was taken, or so much as as heard of, but several Examinations (and with probability of truth too considering the before mentioned proceeding of MORLEY) do appear of his Contrivances of that kind with people of infinite lower ranks, and it is to behoped of infinite different principles too, than it can be thought the Earls of ESSEX and SHAFTSBURY and Sir Robet CLAYION are of, who the Lord Duke of ORMONDE and those named with him do not suppose wou'd Imbarque themselves with such a sort of man as MORLEY is, and in such manner, of Designs as he was upon, so as the setting up of these imaginary depositions, which never had being but in this LIBELLER's idle brain, and in his Idler LIBELL, must have been a piece of MORLEY's magick, by such Incantations to charm those persons of Quality to stand by him in this time of his deservedly Expiring Credit, and to raise their Spirits (thô most Undeservedly) against others whom his and the LIBELLERS malice would point them unto, and whom (though it be impofible to find them out by the mark the LIBELLER puts upon them,) of having obtain'd those depositions, because there were never any such, yet by all this Lurry about Morley, I guess them to be certain persons of such uprightness and integrity as I am certain, they will not fear to have their Actions pla-neit

Eng

gers!

ever

espec

please

cause

thewe

ving (

presen

Perju

speak

ly, ing his to find being c'd in that approaching light of a PARLIAMENT with which the LIBELLER threatens them, and which then Shines brightest when MORLEY and the LIBELLER, and such other sons of darkness are scatter'd from before it, and thanks be to God, we have no reason to despair of a blessing of that kind to attend that time, for the weather seems to clear very much, and the aire to be so well upon Purifying, that those infections cannot remain. And as the LIBELLER has thus ingenuously in this Paragraph represented things that never were, so he will not leave it off untill he has as ingenuously mifrepresented Matters otherwise than they were, according to the saying of Fame, the true Parent of this lying Monster, that pariter fa-Eta atque infecta canebat; thus purposely to reflect upon persons concerned in this Government (which the scope of his whole discourse as to Ireland drives at) he wou'd from the receiving an Information which was given in here against MORLEY, for such treasonable expressions as are not fit to be repeated, but in a Judicial way of proceeding against him, and from the transmission which was made of it to the KING and COUNCIL in ENG-LAND, infer a fondness, & I do not know what, to have been in them of it, whereas they did but as they were bound, in taking a matter of that dangerous import when it was offer'd, and as they wou'd have done, if it had related to any one else besides MORLEY, and only observed their duty and the Custome of their Predecessors in transmitting (as they alwaies did) things of such a transcendent nature, let them concern whomsoever they wou'd, And why this ordinary practis'd method in all other Cases, shou'd be thus extraordinarily handled and represented in MORLEY's by the LIBELLER, is what I cannot think of any other reason to be given for, but this, that he is a LIBELLER; Besides, suppose it were true, as the LIBELLER says, (and it is the only thing he says of affairs in IRELAND which supposition it self can help) That at the time of this transmission as to MORLEY it was withal desir'd he shou'd be sent over hither to be Tried, where his Crime was supposed to be done. (altho really no such thing was uch lear

that has never

isre.

lay-

er fa-

rlons

edif.

n In-

Such

tudi-

i Tron

NG.

en in

iking

nd as

elides

meot

things

pever n all

repre-

annot lat he

as the

lays help)

d was where

thing

was defired) and that the KING had granted it, which He neither did, nor denyed, because no application was made for it, do's the LIBELLER believe himself? or can he imagin any one else will believe him in, but laugh at him for, this his doctrine thereupon, That it were illegal and Arbitrary to send a Malefactor to be Tryed here for a fact committed by him here; For surely that is as legal and looks something more reasonable than to send for persons from hence to be Tryed in England for things they are only charged to have Committed here, as we see has of late been practised, and which thô the Lawyers say may be done in this Case, I am sure no Lawyer will ever allow what the LIBELLER says in the other Case, especially, if no pertinenter a reason be given than this, which he affigns for it, because the party was born and bred and has an Estate in ENGLAND, For such Circumstances alone, can never protect any one in ENGLAND, or IRELAND, from an-Swering for his breach of the Laws in either KINGDOM, and in that KINGDOM too, where he so broke them if the KING please to have him sent thither. Nay in this Case of MORLEY, if the matter charged upon him to be Committed here (from which I shall not with the LIBELLER acquit him only because he is a PROTESTANT, considering what kind of one he shewed himself in the times of usurpation, thorough-pacedly serving of them, and what fort of one he manifests himself in the present time of faction, by those baser Offices of subornation and Perjury ministring to it,) were any felony under Treason, I speak it with reverence, it were unjust not to send him hither to be tryed, because the Statute of Hen. the 8th for Tryalof forreign matters in England, extends expressy and only to Treasons, so that lesser Offences done here cannot be tryed there, and configuently, to have kept him in such Case on the other side from appearing here, wou'd be to hinder a malefactor from being brought to Justice, which were not Just; But as MORLETS Case is, being for Treason Committed here, which by that Statute may be Tryed there, the KING can Justly enough (if He Pleases) detain him to be Tryed in ENGLAND,

OL

or (if he thinks fit) as Justly too may send him hither for Tryal. for by that Statute it is in the KINGS Choise, in which of the KINGDOMS such a Case shall be Try'd; But then if the Tryal be ordered to be there upon a Treason Committed here, the Indges in ENGLAND are therein to Govern themselves according to the Laws of Ireland, that is, they are not to adjudge any thing to be Treason, but what is so by the Law of IRELAND, or by some Act of PARLIAMENT in ENGLAND where IRELAND is named, or that is Enacted in IRELAND; and this Rule holds concerning Pleas in difcharge of Treason also, wherefore though MORLEY'S charge consists of Treasonable words only, and they really were spoken two years ago as the LIBELLER observes, whereby he was to be discharged by the late Statute in ENGLAND (if they were alledg'd there) yet being laid to be spoken here, where that Statute not naming IRELAND, nor being Enacted in IRELAND do's not extend, he cannot reap any Benefit by it; From all which though I will not take upon me to conjecture, what were the Caufes MORLEY was not sent hither, yet I may rationally conclude, that they cou'd not be any of those which are given by the LIBELLER for it, so as he proves to be as grofly out in his Matters of Law as he is notorioufly mistaken in his matters of fact; And where, for Conclusion of this his Paragraph, and for the bringing off Morley by it, he says, it is remarkable that what MORLEY did declare, (I suppose he intends to the PARLIAMENT) in relation to the Duke of ORMONDE the Lord CHANCELLOR, and Sir John Davis, he refer'd kimself for, the truth of it to the Council Books or to depositions before the Council of this Kingdom; it is more remarkable that MORLEY did declare nothing there (whatsoever he has done elsewhere) as to any of those Persons, save only Sir JOHN DAVIS, and as to him that he refer'd nothing to the COUNCIL BOOKS, or to depositions before the COUNCIL to prove, other than a pretended Copy he produced of the said ô Neal or TYRRELLS Examination, but of which there never was any Original inthe ing, so to pre his Sca destroy The

bringst

of what as HAI without names, 1 ticulars fertion W up Shad them or LERSfir his next first brow folly, or therefore count of of that m his Judg my Lord! as being ? HAMIL there acq to his ho

Mr. HAV

NISES 1

he had a and that twist the (wearing Plot, and promised in

in the Council books or at the Council Board, or indeed in being, so as the LIBELLER by his thus elaborately attempting to preserve MORLEYS gasping reputation, for support of his Scandalous reflections upon the Government, does but de-destroy his own Credit, and confound his own Devices.

of

be

ihen

e of

Da-

}...ks

it is here

thole

him

ore-

There are two other persons, whom the LIBELLER brings by head and shoulders into this Paragraph for evidence of what he aims at by it, but he giving only furnames to them as HANLON, and MURPHY, whereby it is Impossible without more certainty, out of the herds that are of those names, to gather whom he means, and not affigning any particulars to have come from them, in proof of his General asfertion which he Cites them for, by means whereof he only fets up Shadows to be contested within them; I will therefore pass them over and come to that more folid body in the LIBEL-LERS single opinion of Mr. HAWKINS, whom he shews as his next and last man, but who performed such a part when he first brought himself upon the stage, as I cannot tell whether folly, or something that is worse were his greatest Vice, and therefore I will determin on neither side, but give a true account of it, as it has been collected out of the Original papers of that matter, and then let any sober and impartial man make his Judgment of it, and of him upon it, which was thus; Mr. HAWKINS (between whom and some of the mac GEN-NISES his neighbours there were some differences) came to my Lord LIEUTENANT to the CASTLE, having made his way as being a stranger by presenting of a letter from Sir HANS HAMILTON a late member of the Council unto his GRACE, & there acquainted his Grace that one Daniel Hanvy came to him to his house in the Country, and told him of a meeting which he had a little before with one Con mac Gennis at Down-Patrick, and that among other things which at that meeting passed betwixt them, mac GENNIS engaged him to joyn with him in swearing HIS GRACE, Mr. HAWKINS and others into the Plot, and at the same time did give him a little money, and promised him a great deal more when they shou'd afterwards meet, meet, as they then agreed to do at Dublin, where the defign was to be carried on betwixt them, That with this Information Mr. HAWKINS repaired to Sir HANS HAMILTON. who advised him to carry it to my LORD LIEUTENANT where he thus brought it hereupon my Lord LIEUTENANT caused Mr. HAWKINS to bring HANVY to him, and after his GRACE had with great privacy taken his Examination. which was much to the purpose aforesaid, he asked Mr. HAWKINS if he knew CON mac GENNIS, and where he was to be found, which he said he did very well, and that as HANVY told him, he was come to Town in order to their aforesaid appointed meeting, which was to be sometime on that or the day following, and though Mr. HAWKINS did not know the certain house where it shou'd be in, yet he would learn it from HANVY, and thereupon he proposed to bis GRACE that for having more Witnesses besides HANVY of what shou'd pass at that intended meeting, his GRACE wou'd appoint another Trusty person to joyn with one NEAL mac LAUGHKIN whom Mr. HAWKINS defigned to employ, tor so disposing of themselves in the Room of the House where the others were to meet in, that they might (without being observed by them) see them, and hear the discourses betwixt them; Which my LORD LIEUTENANT complied with, and was accordingly done, only with this Variation. that Mr. HAWKINS employed another in that service in the stead of mac LAUGHLIN, who cou'd not be found. In the mean time his GRACE kept this matter as a secret from all persons, least any disapppointment shou'd befall such a promised discovery, afterwards Mr. HAWKINS came to my LORD LIEUTENANT, and acquainted him the parties had met, and the person appointed by his GRACE, with the other whom Hawkins did employ in the Over hearing of them, came likewise, & told his Grace that they saw HANVY & another man whom he call'd CON mac GENNIS together, and heard them discourse of fuch designs as were at first informed, but withal that they obferved and heard mac GENNIS to say at their parting to the Ma-

Mafter to the at HA my Lo be fent GENN to be for time his too, and whom with he had the parts, he far one HENI not, but re ing any Lo fatisfied at before he re GENNIS had occasion of a Deput for from he wonder'd a frangly fu ther with shou'd now LIEUTEN attending.

to him, de mac GEN and confid him was first comi

very well, a that DUF

tion

IM

INT

atter

ion,

Mr.

e he

at as their

e on

INS

yet ed to

Tof

oud

, mac

ploy,

touse

it be-

s be-

plied

tion,

n the

n the Uper-

miled IRD

t,and

Haw.

fe,&

n he se of

the Master of the house, who came towards the end of their discourse to them These words, take notice I never saw this person pointing at HANVY before the last night, upon this Report brought to my Lord LIEUTENANT He ordered CON mac GENNIS to be sent for, who appeared and denied his name to be CON mac GENNIS, affirming it to be OWEN DUFFY, and proved it to be so by invincible Circumstances; but he owned at the same time his having gone under the name of CON mac GENNIS too, and his having had the aforesaid meeting with HANVY. whom withal he protested he never saw until the night before he had the meeting with him, which with his other feigned parts, he said he was prevailed upon to Act, by the desires of one HENRY FARREL, whose reason for the same he knew not, but referr'd it to FARREL to declare: At his proceeding my Lord LIEUTENANT (as any one wou'd be) was strangly surprised, and the more, because his GRACE was satisfied at his first sight of the Man, who now is DUFFY, and before he named himself to be so, that he was not CON mac GENNIS whom HANVY had described, for him His GRACE had occasions to see and know long before, in the quality of a Deputy Pursuvant for dispatching of Irish Witnesses, sent for from hence into ENGLAND, but what HIS GRACE most wonder'd at was, that HANVY shou'd have affirmed as he did. his having had a familiar acquaintance for many years together with that CON mac GENNIS before, and yet that he shou'd now take this DUFFY for him; Hereupon my Lord LIEUTENANT had HAWKINS and HANVY who were attending, called in, where HANVY upon the question put to him, declared again such his long acquaintance with CON mac GENNIS, and all the other matters touching him, and confidently affirmed, that DUFFY then present before him was the Man, and Mr. HAWKINS (although at his first coming to my Lord LIEUTENANT, and as is before mentioned, he told His GRACE that he knew CON mac GENNIS very well, and consequently, cou'd not but at this time know that DUFFY whom he saw thus to personate him was another

CON

CON

the Co

whithe

him, at the nai

quiry h

they had obscure m

man (wh

name of (

ing himle

for CON

with mic

which Dl

ted to m

was the

fwading

oy, and now let

Fudge, 11

that mun

LIBELL

of OR.I.

SENTE

lent him

the viri

Very gri

any P

take

on an

Was g

t00 S

ther person) yet as if he wou'd have had my Lord Lieutenant deceived, did suffer Duffy to passupon His GRACE for Con mac GENNIS, without offering any thing to undeceive him. until my Lord LIEUTENANT did at last take notice to them. how that person had proved himself to be OWEN DUFFY and how his Grace himself knew that it was not CON mac GENNIS, upon which HANVY and HAWKINS confessed themselves to be mistaken, and so in great confusion vanished; After this scene was thus over, which in the persons and the parts of it looked the most odd, and was the least intelligible. that for a great while has been presented, my Lord LIEUTE-NANT conducted the whole matter to the Council, where it feemed as a perfect riddle, and because FARRELL appeared the ablest to unfold it, by giving an account how he came to make DUFFY personate CON mac GENNIS unto HANVY, he was order'd to be examined, who in his Examination and upon his Oath declared, that NEAL mac LAUGHLIN did some time before, lodging at his house, let fall expressions which gave him suspicion of HAWKINS his being upon some evil defigns, and that he was confirmed therein afterwards, by lighting upon a letter from HAWKINS to mac LAUGHLIN which FARRELL produced, and HAWKINS confessed, but pretends to be an innocent end, and which directed mac LAUGHLIN to go to one RAWLINSON in Dublin for the furnishing him with money, enjoyning him afterwards to repair to HAWKINS into the North concerning the business which mac LAUGHLIN was to do for him; That after mac LAUGH-LIN (who then went to the North accordingly) returned unto Town, he came to Farrells house, but told him that he was to lodge no longer with him, for that he had a lodging provided in another place hard by the faid RAWLINSON; which with FARRELLS observing of mac LAUGHLIN to be slush of money, and understanding that HAWKINS was come to Town, put it out of all doubt with him that there was some mischief a contriving, which Farrell resolved to imploy himfelf in the finding out, and for that purpose remembring that mac

Mant

n mac

them,

r, and

l mac felled

ished;

igible,

UTE.

nere it

ceared

me to

INT.

r and

lome

which

il de-

ls, by

HLIŃ

, but

mac

efur-

repair

which '

IGH.

unto

as to

vided

phics

fulh

le to

Cone

1884

that

mac LAUGHLIN had been very inquisitive of him for CON mac GENNIS, and perceiving several messengers to come to his house at divers times in a day to enquire for CON mac GENNIS, as from persons newly come out of the Country, He dogg'd some of Them to a certain House whither he prevailed with OWEN DUFFY to go with him, and if there shou'd be Occasion to take upon him the name of CON mac GENNIS, after whom this great inquiry had been, and when they came thither and a little after they had talked something loud, on purpose to be heard by an obscure man who they were told was in the next Room, that man (who proved to be DANIEL HANVY) hearing the name of CON mac GENNIS, came in unto them, and applying himself to DUFFY, whom he took or pretended to take for CON mac GENNIS, finding him to be called so, said to him with much kindness, you know we have great business to do, to which DUFFY answered, yes, yes, and so after having appointed to meet together the next day, they then parted, which was the only occasion, as FARREL said, of his thus perfwading DUFFT to personate CON mac GENNIS unto Hanvy, and of such meeting and discourse had betwixt them, and now let any one who reads these true passages of that affair Judge, whether Mr. HAWKINS has acquitted himself like that man of honor, discretion, and ingenuity, which the LIBELLER wou'd blazon kim; and whether my Lord DUKE of ORMONDE be not a more merciful person to the DIS-SENTERS, than the LIBELLER wou'd feem before to reprefent him, fince notwithstanding Mr. HAWKINS be one of the virulenst of them, and by such his proceedings appeared a very great Trifler with, if not an Affronter of GOVERN-MENT, yet his GRACE let him go without inflicting any Punishment upon him for it, althô ke cou'd not but take more notice of him afterwards, when an Information amounting as near to HIGH TREASON as cou'd be was given into the Council against him, and by such a Person too as Mr. Florence Weyer a Sanctified evidence in ENGLAND and

and who was one of the Chiefest of those Witnesses upon whose Testimonies the Titular Primate PLUNKET was found guilty in the Kings Bench there, for which reason the LIBELLER never to much as mentions WEYER here, but only takes notice of mac GENNIS and mac LAUGHLIN who swore latter in time, and much inferior in matter against HAWKINS than the other did, and as to mac LAUGHLIN it is observable that though the LIBELLER affirms be never spoke with HAW-KINS but once, and then only to infinuate into his acquaintance. yet HAWKINS himself in his Examination owns to have known him and to have Employed him in his business for some years past; And besides it is manifest by HAWKINS his above mentioned Letter to Mac LAUGHLIN (which FARRELL produced upon his being Examined, and HAWKINS Confessed in his Examination to be his hand) that there was a familiar acquaintance betwixt him and Mac LAWGHLIN before, which Letter, looking so suspicious, and being followed with WEYERS and the others Informations, which founded fo dangerous, my Lord LIEUTENANT and COUNCIL cou'd do no less than as they did, to Commit HAWKINS upon them, and notwithstanding the LIBELLER and his Party wou'd now, because it seems to thwart their designs, reslect upon the Government for doing of it, as too much countenancing of Informations, yet (as has been found by late experience,) they wou'd be apt at another time (if it might advance their purposes) more severely to fall upon the GOVERNMENT for not doing of it, as too great discountenancing of Evidence, so partial and so passionate are the FACTIOUS.

Thus, (Sir,) have I run through the several Parts of this LIBELL, which touch upon this Kingdom, and the Government of it, and in my answers to them, I have for the most part mentioned and referr'd unto such papers of Estate & publick Records, and besides, all thematters of them prove to fall within the knowledges of so many persons living, that if I had not a singular regard to truth (which I hope I shall ever follow) and a particular respect feed for may be a diventur veracity, Precautio work) I had render tible to t who thou principles to expose his

Dublin the 1 April 168

through it

am with El spect for you (whom I am certain I will never abuse) yet you may be sure I wou'd not dare and therefore that I have not adventur'd to say any thing, but what contains the greatest veracity, since in doing otherwise (which was a sufficient Precaution to me from the beginning unto the end of this work) I knew I shou'd be by variety of Testimonies disproved, and render'd not only as Odious, but as Ridiculous and Contemptible to the World, as our LIBELLER has shewn himself, who though he won'd have it believed, as if he were in his principles the farthest removed from the Papish Party, do's yet expose his LIBELL (by the gross lies which are dispersed through it) to be the nearest allied unto the Popish Legend. I am with Esteem and respect, Dublin the 1st. of April 1682.

Sir

Your most affectionate and most humble Servant.

of west of a post of the second state of the second second Welling & Prook Wou thank notes lowns soyal by a retation of the Barbor out Brown Massawrief thout son When re Housand Bothsland vegun at Savis & Canside on over all Dolla he vil. of Line word of the last word

